"Doctor Kildare" Had A Lot to Learn about Hospitals

UNTIL Richard Chamberlain was cast for the title role in the hour-long Doctor Kildare drama series, the youthful actor had never been in a hospital as a patient and only once as a visitor.

He realized that a lot of homework was necessary if he were to act convincingly in the weekly series, and jumped at the opportunity to tour the Los Angeles County Hospital with Dr. George Andros, an interne and the original technical consultant for the show.

The series is seen Saturday nights on the CBC-TV network.

A native of California, Chamberlain portrays Dr. Kildare who has a great admiration for Dr. Leonard Gillespie, senior doctor in internal medicine, under whom he aspires to have a residency. Dr. Gillespie is played by Canadian-born actor Raymond Massey. Others appearing in the series include Eddie Ryder as Doctor Agurski and Jud Taylor as Doctor Gerson.

Chamberlain's tour of the hospital, dressed in one of the green gowns that doctors wear, included a visit to surgery where he watched an ulcer operation, an appendectomy and the stitching of a knife wound.

"Surgery on the stomach ulcer was already in progress when I got there," explained Chamberlain, "and I was allowed to stand just beyond the patient's head.

"During the operation the surgeon and his staff kept up a running line of chatter—it seems to keep them relaxed—about similar operations and the surgeons who performed them.

"How these doctors can carry on, hunched over in surgery, I don't know. After four hours, my back ached, my feet hurt and my eyes felt like fireballs. But I can't wait to go back again."

The Dr. Kildare series doesn't go into too much detail on the surgical side of hospital life, but rather, unveils the emotional problems of the people with whom doctors come in contact.

Episodes follow a pattern established by the popular motion picture series of the same name, which starred Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayers. Themes, of course, are somewhat less complex because of the limited time.

Chamberlain is no stranger to television. He has appeared in such television series as Gunsmoke, Alfred Hitchcock Presents, Thriller, The Deputy and Mr. Lucky. He has also had feature movie roles in Secret of the Purple Reef and Thunder of the Drums.

Favourite Songstress of Canada's Favourite Comedians

Sylvia Murphy, regular last year on Music Makers, brings her singing talent and feminine charm to the Wayne and Shuster series on CBC-TV this year. The favourite comedy show, irregularly scheduled, is seen this Wednesday evening.

FOOTSOKE KEN CAVANAGH, who must be CBC's travelling-est reporter-broadcaster, is taking time out from his cross-Canada trip for Assignment (Dominion Network, Monday to Friday) to interview a prodigious young publishing magnate for CBC Trans-Canada's Project '62 (Sunday at 5 p.m.).

Hugh Hefner, who at 36 is head of a magazine empire built up in less than a decade, presents a marked change-of-pace for interviewer Cavanagh. Hefner is founder and moving force behind Playboy and Show Business Illustrated, two of the continent's most sophisticated and successful publications. Called a living promotion stunt, "the most conspicuous playboy of the middle-western world," the youthful millionaire lives on Chicago's exclusive North State Street.

Cavanagh's more frequent interviewees, on his "Assignment-Canada" series, have been grass-roots Canadians in the everyday occupations throughout the nation's cities and towns—opposites in personality and environment to the slick young American, but in no way less interesting.

Cavanagh's daily reports on Assignment have been suspended for the time being because of difficult travelling during the winter months. But little else has impeded him during his tireless trek, which had amounted to 13,000 miles of driving between Newfoundland and Manitoba, where he stopped over late in November.

Journeying in a panel truck equipped with bed and cooking facilities, he has poked his nose—and microphone—into little-known corners of this vast country, with his purpose quite simply to tell Canadians more about their homeland. "My trip," says Cavanagh, "is probably one of the most extensive research jobs undertaken by the CBC." Material he is collecting will be edited for use also in a special Dominion Day program this year on Venture, on the Trans-Canada Network.

INEVITABLE as the bonspiel thaw, CBC's sports reporters will be on hand for the important curling events across the Prairies in the next few weeks.

Starting off the special coverage will be a half-hour broadcast on CBX at 11:15 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 5, from the Alberta Schoolboys' Championships Bonspiel. Then on CBW Monday to Friday, Feb. 5 to 9, Bob Moir, assisted by announcer Walter Unger, reports from the Manitoba Curling Association bonspiel at 1:45 p.m., 5:45 p.m. and 11:30 p.m.

On Feb. 10, the Saskatchewan Consols Finals in Saskatoon will be reported at 11:30 p.m. on CBK by Ken Reeves, describing the wrap-up of the final ends, etc. Ken Reeves will again be on hand at 11:00 p.m. Feb. 12 in Regina when the Saskatchewan High School championships are concluded, once more describing the final ends.

The Manitoba Consols Playoffs, Feb. 12 to 15 inclusive, will be covered daily on CBW by Bob Moir with broadcasts at 1:45 p.m., (Please turn to page 4)

KEN CAVANAGH

5:45 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. On Feb. 15, as well as the 1:45 and 5:45 broadcasts, Bob will present a one-hour description of the final ends, starting at 10:30 p.m.

Back in Alberta, the Alberta Consols Finals in Calgary Feb. 16 will include interviews, draw results, etc., at 1:04 p.m. on CBX, and at 10:30 p.m., a wrap-up of the day's activities. On Feb. 17, 11:10 p.m. to conclusion, the final ends and trophy presentation will be described. Commentators for all the Alberta broadcasts will be Glenn Bjarnason and Ernie Afaganis, with production by Dave Cruickshank.

Of course, further coverage will be included for all the above bonspiels in regular sports reports, telecasts and summaries. News of other curling events as well will be carried on these regular programs.

The Nature of Things:

What Makes Up the Earth's Interior?

DR. J. TUZO WILSON of the University of Toronto compares the interior of the earth to a soft-boiled egg: this planet has a fluid core like the yolk; a solid mantle like the white; and a brittle crust like the shell. It is probable, although not proven yet, that the earth is a heat engine and that the crust, with its continents and seas, mountain ranges and ocean trenches, has been formed from the upper part of the mantle.

It is an unusual fact that despite man's probing of space and attempts at learning more of other planets, he knows little about the interior of his own planet. In recent years, however, the development of our knowledge about the centre of the earth has been accelerated, especially as a result of the co-ordinated world-wide research efforts conducted during the International Geophysical Year from 1957 to 1959.

At Helsinki in July, 1960, the executive committee of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, which had been a major promoter of the IGY, endorsed a broad program of research on "the upper mantle and its influence on the development of the earth's crust." This would involve investigations of the outer 1,000 kms (625 miles) of the earth, the source of the world's natural resources.

This Thursday evening on CBC television The Nature of Things examines the Upper Mantle Project. Host Lister Sinclair and guests, Professor Wilson and Dr. R. J. Uffen, professor of geophysics at the University of Western Ontario, discuss in layman's terms the major features and objectives of the Upper Mantle Project. The program is written by Colin Edwards and produced by Jim Murray. David Walker is program organizer.

Among the subjects included in the research program, which is to last three years and which began January 1 of this year, are: deep drilling; development of deep sea seismographs for the exploration of the upper mantle under the oceans; special studies of deep focus earthquakes; magnetic and gravimetric studies; studies of tectonic and magmatic development of the crust; theoretical studies of phase changes, thermal conditions, equations of state; and high pressure laboratory studies of the behaviour of rocks.

Scientists of a dozen nations, including Canada, the United States and Russia, plan complementary projects and will pool information during the three years of the Upper Mantle Project. The Canadian parts of the program are vital because in this country there are more interesting, accessible and easy-to-study geological formations of types which provide clues about the interior of the earth than anywhere else in the world.

Co-ordinator of the Canadian projects is Dr. W. E. van Steenburgh, director-general of scientific services of the federal department of mines and technical surveys. He is assisted by Dr. D. C. Rose of the National Research Council and Dr. Uffen. Canadian contributions will cost about $3,000,000

Cartoonist Turns Playwright

JULES FEIFFER, a mild mannered, introspective New York cartoonist with a high forehead, a quizzical expression, and a sly humour that bites sharply, outrageously, in unexpected places, has several brilliantly satirical books of cartoons to his credit. And his first play will have its North American premiere on CBC-TV's Quest, Sunday night, with production by Mario Prizek.

Titled Crawling Arnold, it was written for the 1961 Spoleto (Italy) Festival of Two Worlds. Like his cartoons, it reflects his views on the sickness of 20th-century civilization as revealed in its attitudes to segregation, nuclear weapons, fallout shelters, etc. The situation and Feiffer's dialogue are hilarious, of course, but there's a sting in nearly every laugh.

The cast includes Peter Mews as the unconventional Crawling Arnold; Corinne Conley as Miss Sympathy, a social worker; Jane Mallett and Murray Matheson as Arnold's unusual parents, Mr. and Mrs. Enterprize; and Kathleen Livingstone as Millie, the maid.

Corinne Conley

Feiffer describes himself as a "serious humourist." He thinks his captions are more important than his cartoons, and has rewritten them up to 15 times before he's satisfied, sometimes writing on the subway during the ride from his apartment in Brooklyn to Manhattan. But

Help Wanted. Dr. Margery King replies to questions sent in by viewers.

National Schools Telecast

The Concert Band. The 70-piece orchestra of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, conducted by John Corley, demonstrates how music written for the concert (indoor) band differs from that written for the marching (outdoor) band. Examples used by Dr. Gildey are as follows:

Music for a Festival.....	Gordon Jacob
Psalm for a Band.....	Vincent Persichetti
Symphony for Band.....	Beverdort

Ladies First

Ellen Simmons continues her analysis of Federal Government departments and services and how they affect each citizen.

Alice Poyser previews some of the best reading available from Canadian publishing houses.

Charlotte Lindgren represents the Canadian Association of Consumers in discussing good design.

Dick Tracy

Oils Well. Tracy sends Go Go Gomez to investigate the disappearance of oil from the Texas oil fields.

Stop, Look and Listen

The Hobby Corner. In the second of this year's chess series, Geoff Spurrll demonstrates how to make moves with various pieces. Also, the first in a series of films depicting famous chess games of the past.

The Magic Circle. Dennis Allen continues to talk about Robert Houdine the famous French magician. He also welcomes back as guest Lou Shapiro.

Warren Davis reviews more good reading for youngsters.

CBWT—Warren's Corner. Another in the National Film Board series "What's Your Opinion?" Two young people with an agricultural background discuss the film, dealing with the individual's responsibility to become better informed to increase his effectiveness as a member of the community.

CBWT—Spotlight

Discussions on Boating and Water Safety with Jim Eberts and Bill Greenlay.

CBXT—Eye-To-Eye

Thought-provoking topics are discussed weekly on this program. This week:

Hidden Penalties Of Crime. Part 1.

The beginning of a series examining this topic.

The Nature Of Things

The Upper Mantle Project. A Canadian plan is to survey that part of the earth lying immediately under the crust in an effort to learn more about how the earth was formed and causes of the world's landscapes and weather. The program shows why a piece of lava is unreliable evidence of what lies beneath the earth's crust.

The Defenders

The Locked Room. Story concerns a murder as envisioned in the imaginations of three key jurors.

CBWT—Swingalong

A program of songs with popular singer Doug Crosley as host and the Swingalong chorus. Music arranged by Neil Harris. Producer, Neil Andrews.

Soloist this week is Florence Faiers.

Anything Goes
Toot Toot Tootsie
Carolina in the Morning
There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight	Opening Medley
When I Fall in Love	Doug
Pocketful of Miracles	Chorus
Imagination	Chorus
Look to the Rainbow	Florence

South Rampart Street Parade	Closing Medley

WHAT MAKES UP EARTH'S INTERIOR?

and the dozens of separate and associated schemes will be conducted by universities throughout the country and by the federal government.

The Canadian projects consist of two classes: attempts to study samples of the mantle itself, either by drilling in places where rocks directly from the mantle have broken through the earth's crust, or by drilling in places where the crust is thin or shattered, and indirect attempts to measure properties of the mantle by studying occurrences at and to the surface.

Detailed and economically valuable information is expected to come from drilling where there are large ultrabasic intrusions—where huge cracks in the crust occurred millions of years ago and enormous quantities of rock from the mantle gushed up in liquid form and solidified. There are two types of ultrabasic rocks: those that occur as relatively small bodies of constant composition which are commonly found in ancient mountain belts and are called "alpine;" and those intruded in continental areas, which are usually larger and are marked by a distinct layering, brought about by differentiation (while molten, the material separated into heavier and lighter components, resulting in layers of different composition).

Studies of the alpine-type ultrabasic intrusions to be made include those of Bay of Islands complex, Newfoundland; Mt. Albert, Gaspé, Quebec; and Tulameen, B.C. Work on the layered type is to be done at the Muskox Intrusion in the Coppermine area of the Northwest Territories, considered the world's best-exposed body of its type, and ideal for a complete and systematic study. In order to provide adequate suites of rocks for laboratory study, deep diamond-drill holes are proposed at various places across Canada, generally where seismic stations are to be established (at approximately 500-mile intervals across the country to help scientists learn about the physical properties of the earth's interior from the study of earthquake waves).

Various instruments and measuring devices will be used throughout the Upper Mantle Project to gather such information as the heat flow from within the earth, gravity, the electrical conductivity of the earth and to study the distribution of isotopes, the problems of the wandering of the magnetic poles and the drift of continents.

What Is History? The first of three social studies programs presented by the Departments of Education of the four western provinces in co-operation with the CBC.

Today's program has several aims: it attempts to show that history is not a dry, static subject; that the work of a historian can be as exciting as that of a detective; that a historian needs ingenuity, imagination, patience and a knowledge of the sources of history; that what the historian writes is bound to be influenced by his own view of a particular event.

The historical illustration is based on the 1849 trial of Guillaume Sayer which marked the beginning of free trade at Red River.

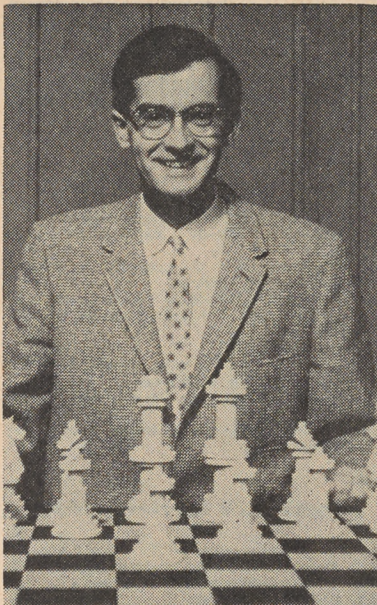

The teacher-narrator is Murray Smith, of Grant Park school in Winnipeg. Written by Marian Waldman. Producer, Alwyn Scott.

FRENCH TELEVISION HIGHLIGHTS

Channel 6—CBWFT

L'Heure du Concert

Thursday, February 8 at 9:00 p.m., the French Television Network presents "Duke Bluebeard's Castle," a one-act opera, the only one by Béla Bartok. It was only in 1918, some seven years after he had composed it, that Bartok's work was first performed. The stage production however, was not overly popular, perhaps because of political conflicts and the composer's close association with Béla Balazs who had written the libretto. "Duke Bluebeard's Castle" has been criticized as being insufficiently dramatic to be entirely successful as an opera. It seems that this criticism is unjust. There is little "action" to be sure, but the music maintains the dramatic tension throughout. The librettist, Balazs, has turned the Bluebeard story into something of a psychological-symbolistic drama that admits various interpretations. The entire action consists of Judith's insisting upon opening in his presence the seven doors of Bluebeard's darkened castle. The blood motif is strong. In the first room, the torture chamber, the walls drip blood; in the second, the armoury, the weapons are blood-covered; the third room, the treasury, discloses quantities of blood-bathed jewels; the opening of the fourth re-

"Road to the Yukon:"

Characters and Tales of the Klondike

THE STORY of the Alaska Highway and the people who make their homes along it is the subject of a new CBC radio series, Road to the Yukon, to be heard Wednesdays at 6:45 p.m. on the Trans-Canada network, beginning this week.

Commentator Bill Herbert and technician Elmer Winton, both of CBC Vancouver, travelled 1,266 miles from Dawson Creek, B.C., to Dawson City, Yukon Territory. Along the way they stopped and talked to the people who live year-round on the 26-foot-wide communications artery into the north. They talked with school teachers, newspapermen, miners, oldtimers, innkeepers, farmers, truckers, priests, oil drillers, bush pilots, nurses, a self-styled "northern hillbilly" and an old prospector who struck it rich on a 30-year-old claim.

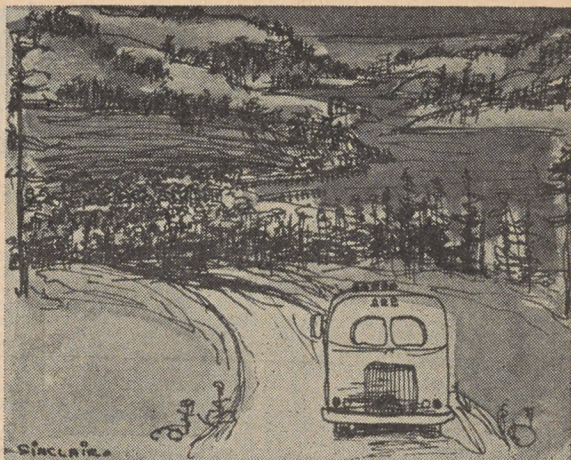

Many of the characters and yarns emanating from the hectic days of the Klondike gold rush are recounted, some by those who were part of that gold rush and others who have had stories and accounts passed down to them. For instance, Mike Winage, who went to the Yukon in 1900, tells about the internationally known bard of the north, Robert W. Service, most famous for his The Shooting of Dan McGrew. Winage, known in those days as Black Mike, made a strike but lost it all through gambling and women. He says that Service was much better as a poet than as a poker player.

Michael Rabin

"Greatest Violin Talent in Three Decades"

MICHAEL RABIN, 25-year-old U.S. violinist, has been described since he was 15 as one of the world's most brilliant musicians, with "a technical facility which would be prodigious in a man three times his age." He will be featured on CBC Wednesday Night this week at 8:30, in a Celebrity Recital broadcast from Queen's University, Kingston. Mitchell Andrews will be his accompanist.

On February 11, Rabin will be seen in The Virtuoso, a youth concert in the music series on Another character to be heard in the series is 80-year-old Tom Brooks, a prospector from Carcross, who writes poetry in much the same style as did Service even though Brooks says he's never read a single line of Service's poetry. An excerpt from Brooks' A Frontier Dive goes: "Just dance hall dames with phony names, so the folks at home wouldn't know; so often with strife and the flash of a knife, or the roar of a .45; they were happy enough though a life was snuffed as they worked in a frontier dive."

Mike Nolan, a big-game hunter at Marsh Lake, near Whitehorse, recounts the story of a bear which threw a rock back at him. "I was running very fast and I heard the whistle," says Nolan. "I looked at the bear and I could see this rock coming at me but I couldn't dodge it. It hit me on the calf and I was lame for two weeks."

Bearded Irwin Armstrong of Guelph is another person to be heard. He works in the woods with Indians and classes himself as a Scots hillbilly "because I write songs about Indians." On the program, he sings Bessie, Charlie, Queen of the Wild Frontier with such lines as "Bessie wants a cow-puncher tall and slim to keep all the cattle in the best of trim; help her milk the cows, tend the garden, too; and late in the evening they have a little brew."

CBC-TV. He will appear with pianist Michel Dus-sault, the CBC Youth Choir conducted by Lloyd Bradshaw, the CBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by Mario Bernardi, and host Louis Applebaum.

Rabin comes from a musical family. His father has been a violinist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra for more than 35 years and his mother was for many years on the piano faculty of the Juilliard School of Music.

METROPOLITAN OPERA

Madama Butterfly by Puccini, featuring soprano Gabriella Tucci, tenor Sandor Konya, baritone Clifford Harvuot and mezzo-soprano Helen Vanni. Conductor is Fausto Cleva.

Place, Nagasaki, Japan. Time, the present.

Act I. Lieut. Pinkerton, U.S.N., and Butterfly, a Japanese girl, are about to enter into a Japanese marriage. The American consul, Sharpless, begs Pinkerton to forego his plan because the girl believes the marriage to be binding. The lieutenant laughs at him and the joyful bride appears with her friends. To show her trust in Pinkerton she has renounced the faith of her ancestors so that she can never return to her own people. The marriage contract is signed and the guests drink a toast to the young couple. The Bonze, a religious fanatic and uncle of Butterfly, comes in and utters imprecations against her for renouncing her faith. He induces her relatives to abandon her. Pinkerton, annoyed, hurries off the angry guests. With loving words he consoles the weeping bride and the two happily enter into their dwelling.

Act II. Part I. Three years later. Pinkerton is absent in America, having promised to return, "When the robins nest again." Suzuki, Butterfly's faithful servant, rightly suspects that this means never, but is upbraided for want of faith by her trusting mistress. Butterfly is the mother of a fair-haired child. Pinkerton has instructed Sharpless in a letter to tell Butterfly that he has an American wife. Seeing her wonderful faith, the consul cannot bear to destroy it and departs sadly. The guns salute the newly arrived man-of-war, the Abraham Lincoln, Pinkerton's ship. Butterfly and Suzuki deck the house with flowers and array themselves and the child in gala dress. All three peer through the shoji to watch for Pinkerton's coming. As the night passes Suzuki and the child fall asleep, but Butterfly, alert and sleepless, never stirs.

Part II. At dawn Butterfly is still watching. Suzuki awakens and brings the baby to her. She persuades Butterfly to rest. Pinkerton and Sharpless arrive and tell Suzuki the sad truth, but the lieutenant is deeply moved and cannot remain. Sharpless tells Suzuki that Mrs. Pinkerton will care for the child if Butterfly will give him up. Butterfly appears, expecting to see Pinkerton, but is confronted instead by his wife. She receives the truth with pathetic calmness, politely congratulates the new wife, and asks her to tell her husband that in half an hour he may have the child, and that she herself will find peace. Then, having bowed her visitors out, she is left alone to her sorrowful fate. At the appointed time Pinkerton and Sharpless return to find Butterfly dead by her own hand after having bidden farewell to her child.

SPORTS

RECENTLY representatives of all National Hockey League teams were in Saskatoon and Winnipeg attending all-star games of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Junior hockey leagues.

While in the West they were questioned several times about the effect N.H.L. telecasts have on minor hockey. There were several points of view—but the hockey operators in the West were unanimous. It's foolish to schedule a game against a National League telecast.

The one scheduled for Saturday night, February 3, is a case in point.

Detroit Red Wings, battling for that all-important playoff berth, meet the first-place Montreal Canadiens, who just can't seem to shake off the dogged Toronto Maple Leafs in the fight for the Prince of Wales trophy, which goes to the first-place finisher each year.

The game therefore, is extremely important to both sides. The television viewer doesn't want to miss this one.

Someone at one of the all-star games mentioned that there is a lack of interest in hockey. Not so, argued former Winnipeg Warrior owner Jack Perrin. He claims hockey has thousands of fans who never go near a rink—the television fans. Boston general manager Lynn Patrick and Toronto assistant general manager King Clancy nodded their heads in agreement.

No one denies the power of the N.H.L. telecasts.

Why shouldn't they be popular?

MOIR

The world's greatest hockey players come into your living room every Saturday night. Take this week's game, for instance.

Twenty-goal scorers like Claude Provost and Ralph Backstrom of the Montreal Canadiens; the leading goal-keeper in the league and a first half all-star, Jacques Plante; Bobby Rousseau, the leading candidate for the rookie of the year honors at the halfway point in the schedule, will all be on view with Bernie Geoffrion, Jean Beliveau, Dickie Moore, Tom Johnson and Henri Richard.

Opposing Montreal in this game will be hockey's greatest right winger, Gordie Howe, who is enjoying his 13th consecutive 20-goal season with Detroit and is fast closing in on New York's Andy Bathgate in the individual point-scoring race.

Howe is undoubtedly the strong point of the Detroit Red Wings. Without him the club would have trouble beating the Boston Bruins out for last place.

Besides the hockey this weekend, there is another episode on the brilliant Wonderful World of Golf. One of the game's great veterans and a former Canadian Open champion, Byron Nelson, meets highly-rated U.S. open champion Gene Littler at the colourful and tradition-steeped Pine Valley Golf Club in New Jersey.

There will also be bowling from the O'Connor Bowl in Toronto and a fine hour-long feature on sport fishing will be carried.

his cartoons usually satisfy him on the first try. For a pen he uses a pared stick of the variety restaurants supply with coffee "to go."

He was born 32 years ago in a corner of the Bronx that "didn't even have the dignity to be a slum." His father was variously a dental technician, a salesman, and held other white-collar jobs; his mother was a fashion designer. Feiffer says his growing-up was plagued with frustrations, and "echoes of my childhood keep creeping into my work. I'm sneaky—I hide behind my pictures." When he graduated from high school in 1946 he learned that he lacked half a credit to enter college, couldn't face the idea of going back to school, and found a job as assistant to a cartoonist.

During the Korean War the American army drafted him. He spent two years "abroad"—"in New Jersey—boy, it was rough." After his discharge with the rank of private he became an animator for Terrytoons. The only outlet he could find for his highly individual cartoons was in the Village Voice, a bright but impecunious Greenwich Village weekly which couldn't afford to pay him or any of its other contributors. But that publicity paved the way for the publication of his first book. A collection of his cartoons appeared in 1958 under the title of Sick, Sick,

Sick, a guide to non-confident living. The modest first run quickly turned into a gallop, and the book became a best-seller. Feiffer was soon paying more in income tax than he had earned the previous year, and enjoying a place among the exalted ranks of Thurber, Steinberg and Mort Sahl.

His second book, Passionella and Other Stories (1959) consisted of four long cartoon strips. Soon after their appearance several leading American newspapers in the United States and Britain began carrying his racy, sharp work, among them The Observer of London. His contract, an unusual one for a cartoonist, insists that not one word in his captions can be changed.

Some of his best cartoons are more stinging or poignant than funny, though he can't help being humorous, even at his most bitter. One of his cartoon sequences from Sick, Sick, Sick, shows a toga clad figure reclining in dark glasses on a psychiatrist's couch. "After all, I was raised away from home," blurts the patient. "How was I to know this guy was my father? I mean, all right, so I killed him. But I didn't know he was my father. And then I meet this dame. How could I know who she was? Is it my fault I like them mature? All right . . . so I marry her. But did I know she was my mother? It's not like I was sick or something . . . O.K., I'll come back next week. I'll bring my daughter. . . . You can talk to her. Boy, has she got problems!"

The Price of Human Dignity

"That we should continue to regard ourselves as responsible beings liable to have to make excruciating moral choices, and not merely be deciding what our preferences are, is of the utmost importance for the worth and dignity of human life as a whole, and for the health of society." — H. D. Lewis on the BBC.

When he was three Michael astonished his parents by identifying the exact notes of steam whistles and automobile horns. He began piano lessons at five. Two years later, when the Rabins were visiting a doctor friend who played the violin as a hobby, Michael and the doctor's young son went rummaging in a cupboard and pulled out a half-size violin. Intrigued by the miniature instrument, Michael asked the doctor if he could have it, and got permission to keep it. His father patched it up and gave Michael lessons. After four months, the elder Rabin realized he had a prodigy on his hands, and arranged for the boy to study with Ivan Galamian, who was on the Juilliard and Curtis faculties. At eight, Michael began putting in between four and eight hours of practice a day—couldn't be dragged away from the violin.

When he made his Carnegie Hall debut in 1950 at 15, playing a Guarnerius de Jesu (1734) instrument lent to him from the famous Rudolph Wurlitzer collection, Dimitri Mitropoulos described him as "a violin genius, equipped with all that is necessary to be a great artist," and director George Szell of the Cleveland Orchestra declared that "Michael Rabin is the greatest violin talent that has come to my attention during the past three decades." "His technique," reported Time magazine after his debut, "was effortless, his tones strong and clean, his style and phrasing in the brilliant manner of Heifetz and Isaac Stern."

By 21 he was a globe-trotting veteran of concerts, radio, TV and recordings—many of which became best-sellers. He has appeared with nearly every major orchestra in North America and Europe. He has made five extensive tours of Europe, two trips to Israel, and has played in Australia and New Zealand. He averages about 12 orchestral appearances in North America each season, in addition to a heavy recital schedule. In 1958 he was one of a handful of young musicians chosen by the Ford Foundation to commission a new work for his instrument from a deserving composer. Rabin selected Paul Creston, and gave the first performance of Creston's Concerto No. 2 late in 1960.

Rabin is a shy, modest, soft-spoken young man who still lives with his parents on Manhattan's Riverside Drive. He drives a sports car, likes to tinker with hi-fi, collects coins and stamps, and enjoys cooking, reading—he's presently on what he calls "a philosophy kick"—and attending the theatre, particularly to see musical comedies.

veals a blood-soaked flower garden; the fifth door opens into the vast domains of Bluebeard, over which the clouds are bleeding. The opening of each door has admitted more and more light into the castle. Bluebeard pleads with Judith not to open the two last doors. She insists, however, and the sixth reveals a lake of tears. As the last door is opened, the first three wives of Bluebeard file silently past and disappear again, richly clothed and bedecked with jewels. Bluebeard, deeply moved, sings that he has not forgotten them; the first came to him in the morning, the second at noon, the third at dusk. He crowns Judith, who came at night, and she disappears to join the others. Darkness now becomes total, as Bluebeard says: "Now it is night, always, for ever."

Whether this early work is considered to be an opera, or a scenic oratorio or whatever else one might choose to call it, it contains many splendid passages. Despite the unmistakable influence of French impressionist style, it is clearly the work of Bartok.

The fact that it is a one-act opera militates against frequent performance in European opera houses. On the other hand, the fact that there are only two singing roles (the three former wives are silent) is a practical consideration in its favour. It is not quite clear why "Duke Bluebeard's Castle" is performed so seldom.

Jan Rubes will sing the role of Bluebeard, while soprano Claire Grenon-Masella will be Judith. Alexander Brott conducts the orchestra.

"Duke Bluebeard's Castle" will be seen on CBWFT Thursday, February 8 on "L'Heure du Concert."

COOK'S TOUR with Mat Gauer

RECIPES FEATURED ON
"LADIES FIRST" EACH TUESDAY
ON CBWT AND CBXT

"OLD FASHIONED TRIFLE" CAKE

- 3 eggs
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup sugar
- $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. vanilla
- $\frac{1}{8}$ tsp. salt
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup sifted flour

Beat eggs until thick and lemon coloured (5 min.) then add sugar and beat again. Add vanilla—fold in flour and salt. Put in 8" x 8" greased and floured pan. Bake at 350 degrees—40 to 45 mins.

FILLING

- 14 oz. can apricots or 2 cans puréed apricots (baby food)
- 11 oz. can mandarin oranges
- 1 lb. can pineapple tidbits
- 1 carton whipping cream

Drain the syrup from apricots and puree the fruit (not necessary with baby food). Cut the cake into 2 layers across and spread with half of the puree. Reassemble the cake and cut into 2" x 1" pieces. Place in the bottom of a large serving bowl. Pour the syrup from the drained oranges over the cake. Spread remaining puree over the cake. Then drain pineapple and put a layer of pineapple and orange sections over puree. Save some pieces for garnish. Next make the custard.

CUSTARD

- $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups milk
- 3 tbsp. cornstarch
- Pinch of salt
- 2 tbsp. sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup crushed macaroons

Combine cornstarch with 2 tbsp. of milk. Put remainder of milk in saucepan and heat. Add cornstarch, sugar and salt and cook until thick. Remove from stove and gradually add 3 beaten eggs. Beat mixture well. Transfer to top of double boiler and simmer for 10 minutes. Then add macaroons and beat until they are dissolved. Pour over cake mixture and let set in refrigerator about 2 hours. Whip cream and add 1 tbsp. icing sugar and $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. vanilla. Spread over trifle and decorate with remaining fruit and a few maraschino cherries. Serves 10 to 12 people.

Prefers Canadian Sport

• I am a great football enthusiast and I rarely fail to watch the games that are televised over the CBC — either our own games or those of the N.F.L. However, I must agree with N.A.S. of Rolling Hills, Alta. (Mailbag, Dec. 30—Jan. 5) regarding the N.F.L. games.

I feel that we are doing both the Canadian game and the Canadian people an injustice by televising these games. It would be different if we did not have entertainment of this calibre in our country. . . . Our Canadian game is a great spectator sport, but there is always the danger that too much football will sour us on our own game.

I do not feel that you will have too many complaints from us football fans if you discontinue these telecasts. I for one would be willing to forego this small pleasure if the time were used to promote something Canadian. —W.W.S., Maryfield, Sask.

Violence on TV Sets Poor Example

• May I say how much we enjoy the CBC. However, I feel I should register my distress over the violence permitted on TV.

We are aware that our greatest aid in teaching children is their desire to mimic. We realize that we must set the example and not just tell them what to do, because it is by the example that they are most effectively taught. On TV, when violence is viewed, an example is most certainly before our young people.

I am opposed to violence, particularly with reference to children's programs. An opposing argument is that traditional fairy tales are quite terrifying; but at least such stories are heard only. Therefore, the child's picture of the story is limited by the circumference of his imagination. . . . Whereas, on TV, the child sees and hears the story. The pictures and sounds are not restricted by the outer limits of a child's imagination, but are the result of adult imagination. . . .

Please consider the above. — Mrs. A.A.S., Weyburn, Sask.

Youngsters Enthusiastic Viewers

• To Mrs. Nickerson (Busy Fingers, CBWT and CBXT): The children at North Springfield School and I (their teacher) are still watching your program with delight. It is the topic under discussion at many of our lunch hours. . . . It is amazing what one program of yours did to make the children in my room aware of, and interested in, the children of Czechoslovakia. (Mrs. Nickerson visited classrooms behind the Iron Curtain last summer, and brought back films of life in those countries which she shows on her programs.—Ed.)

I think the good that your program is doing is very far-reaching, and I would like to wish you continued success in 1962.—Miss D.S.L., Winnipeg.

• Dear Mrs. Nickerson: I would like to thank you and the Winnipeg Public Library for the book you sent me. It is such a happy book and I liked it very much. I love all the little creatures in it.

It was so nice to see my drawing on TV. I like to draw better than anything else. Some day I would like to be an artist. . . . — I.J.B., St. Vital, Man.
